ORIENT

Diver design models are an important part of ORIENT's 70-plus year history, representing everything that is ORIENT since their launch in the 1960s. These latest models feature the same basic specifications as the current range, such as sapphire crystal, enhanced water resistance to 20 bar, and ORIENT's automatic movement that provides stable high accuracy and reliability. However, in contrast to ORIENT's existing traditional styles, the new models offer more casual and fashionable designs that can be worn on any occasion.

The new models stand out thanks to their distinctive bi-colour rotating bezel and ORIENT's signature colour gradation dials. On the aluminum plate of the bezel, two different colours share borders separated at the triangular and 15-minute markers. There are four dial colours to choose from: grey, blue-green, blue, and a limited-edition burgundy, serving as striking accents to the bi-color bezel. The luminescent material with a sepia-toned vintage effect on the hands and dot indices provides the well-worn look of a watch that has been used and loved for many years. These details, together with colour gradation dials create an eye-catching vintage look.

A limited edition of just 2,000 pieces, featuring a burgundy gradation dial, bronze-coloured case, and brown leather strap is the most impressive model reflecting a truly vintage look down to the finest detail. The most recent Diver design models have been referred to as must-have items which express each owner's personal style, and many owners choose to wear them around town. The four new models, including the limited-edition, break the convention of divers' watches, meeting the demand of those who wish to have fun with fashion trends while expressing their own personal style.
